Dear Carol:

In early fall 1990, I wrote a letter to a church in Germany near the area we had visited a month earlier. Wonder of wonder, on 27 Jul 1993, they answered! Though I had given up hope on them, I must say that their answer was well researched. On the enclosed Locht chart, they provided everything there on #4-5, 8-11, 16-19, plus the birth of #2. On the Bruhn chart, they furnished almost everything on #4-5, 8-11, except the names of #4 & 5. Even here, the name of #5 on her son's death record in Porter Co. is Elsabe Frodie. Since Trede is also a Porter Co. name, I am assuming that the death record name got mis-written or misread somewhere.

The fact that the Trede name appears on that Bruhn sheet, and again as #31 (the latter being in my ancestoral line) is intriguing in that Art Trede was a well-known figure around our area. I believe I checked once before and decided that there was not a great deal of genealogical data on Art Trede. He conceivably could have been about the age of Dora Bruhn, and perhaps they were cousins of some sort.

I realize that you are more interested in Bruhn material than Locht, but since I have both of these fresh off the copier, I will send them. As I think you can tell, Carl Hamann (#6 on Bruhn page) was the brother of Magdalena Hamann (mother of Johanna Maria Paulsen Hintz), so that is our common line. Wiebke Locht's husband Friedrick Hamann was Carl's son and Sophia Bruhn's brother. Needless to say this increased my data base considerably.

If you're hunting things up on the map, Hademarschen is almost directly north of Itzehoe and probably about 10-12 miles northeast of Hochdonn and Suderhastedt. Beldorf is about 3-4 mi. west of Hademarschen, while Bendorf is about 3-4 miles southwest of Hademarschen. The village of Pemeln (on the Locht page) is almost touching Hademarschen on its northwest side. I hope you find this of interest, and hope it lets you know that I am in fact still living, even if I have not written for some time. Maybe we'll get together again someday.

Sincerely,

Al

Allen G. Hamann
